Premier blasts 'Lake of Fire' writings

Blog post. Nine-month-old comments stir some controversy on campaign trail

The Wildrose party went into damage-control mode Sunday after one of its candidates' anti-gay rants raised the ire of many voters and prompted a response from rivals.

The controversy stems from a blog written by Allan Hunsperger, a pastor who's running as a Wildrose candidate in Edmonton South, in which he warned against accepting gays and lesbians for who they are.

In his comments, written in June 2011, Hunsperger criticized the Edmonton Public School Division's views of accepting students for who they are and used Lady Gaga's album, Born This Way, as part of his analogy.

"You see, you can live the way you were born, and if you die the way you were born then you will suffer the rest of eternity in the lake of fire, hell, a place of eternal suffering."

With only one week left before the election, Premier Alison Redford wasted no time joining in the condemnation of the comments that quickly spread to social media.

"The fact that there are people who think that's a legitimate perspective just absolutely blows my mind," Redford told reporters in Calgary Sunday.

Wildrose leader Danielle Smith said she was aware of Hunsperger's religious views and made it clear that they won't have any effect on her party's policy if it forms government.

"I also said in the debate that we recognize that people have a great diversity of viewpoints ... it's not unique to our party," Smith said Sunday.

Belfast looks back on Titanic with sorrow and pride

Centennial. Cities on both sides of the Atlantic commemorate the 100-year anniversary of the sinking of ship

As the 1912 disaster was commemorated around the world, the city that built the vessel — Belfast, Northern Ireland — looked back on the tragic sinking of Titanic with a distinctive mixture of sorrow and pride.

In the North Atlantic, passengers lined the decks of the MS Balmoral, a cruise ship that has been retracing the route of the doomed voyage, as the ship stopped early Sunday at the spot where the Titanic went down in the early hours of April 15, 1912.

Another cruise ship, Journey, which travelled from New York, also held a service at the site, about 650 kilometres off the coast of Newfoundland.

A century on, events around the globe marked a tragedy that retains its grip on the world's imagination.

In Belfast, a memorial monument was unveiled Sunday at a ceremony attended by local dignitaries, relatives of the dead and explorer Robert Ballard, who discovered the wreck of the Titanic on the ocean floor in 1985.

Remembrance ceremonies were also being held in the ship's departure port of Southampton, southern England — home to hundreds of Titanic crew who perished — and in Halifax, where about 150 victims of the tragedy are buried.

Belfast spent decades scarred by its link to the disaster, but has come to take pride in the feats of engineering and industry involved in building the ship. Last month, a gleaming new visitor attraction, Titanic Belfast, opened on the site of the shipyard where the doomed vessel was built.

"The focus of the world is on Belfast and we are doing her proud," said Una Reilly, chair of the Belfast Titanic Society. "We are all proud of this ship. What happened was a disaster; she was not."

Reserve fighting against addiction

Item number nine in the letter to members of the Cat Lake reserve from the children in Grade 6 is as blunt as it is painful.

"It hurts us and shoomis and kokum (grandpa and grandma) when you're doing drugs and you're not at home." Cat Lake in northern Ontario is the epicentre of prescription drug addiction in Canada. Community leaders figure that between 70 and 80 per cent of the adults are hooked on OxyContin or Percocets.

Buying from a box. Retail kiosks gain momentum

A growing number of retailers are installing automated kiosks in the corners of their stores, hoping to drive product sales for DVD rentals or even iPads in a space once reserved for dust bunnies and trash bins.

It's a trend that's gaining momentum in Canada after several years of success in the United States, where everything from soap to live bait has been sold out of the automated dispensers.

"Look at the advantage — you don't need a clerk and your rent is a fraction of the cost," said Shamira Jaffer, the founder and president of Signifi, a company based in Mississauga, Ont. that's developing the technology for the retail market.

Jaffer hopes Canadians will warm to buying a wide array of items from machines, such as cosmetics, electronics and video games.

"It's only a matter of time," she added.

Canadian businesses are taking a more conservative approach, choosing consumer favourites like DVD rentals to test the market, but creators of the kiosks are optimistic that this is just the start.

In Canada, all of the kiosk operators are private companies, so their revenues aren't made public, which makes it tough to determine whether Canadians are adopting the concept en masse. According to a report from Convergence Consulting Group, kiosks are just two per cent of the market in Canada.

- The concept seems to be working for a handful of companies that dove into the Canadian DVD rental kiosk business to take advantage of a nationwide shuttering of video chains.

Canadian Tire briefly tested the market with a handful of kiosks that sold clothing and accessories from its Mark's stores. One was placed at the highly trafficked Union Station transit hub in downtown Toronto, generating plenty of attention. But the kiosk didn't catch on and the retailer decided to retire the pilot project.

Latin America splits with Canada, U.S. on Cuba

Summit. Allowing Cuba to participate may undercut democratic gains in the hemisphere, experts argue Prime Minister Stephen Harper came to the Summit of the Americas with the goal of bolstering ties with the booming region, but left Sunday on a discordant note because of his government's stance on Cuba's participation.

Canada and the United States stood alone in balking at an agreement to allow Cuba to attend future summits. That disagreement, and a lack of consensus on backing Argentina's claim to the Falkland Islands, scuppered a final declaration from the 31 participating nations.

Even the summit host, Colombian President Juan Manuel Santos, declared it to be "unacceptable" that Cuba not attend the next meeting three years from now. Other major players, such as Argentina and Brazil, have echoed the sentiment.

Harper emphasized that Canada has reached out to Cuba, and does not agree with the American embargo of the country. But he said Canada is sticking with the summit principles that state that members must be democracies — an idea that originated under Liberal prime minister Jean Chretien during the Quebec City summit of 2001.

"While we don't support the position of isolating Cuba, we do believe that the Summit of the Americas should be restricted to democratic countries, and that Cuba should be encouraged to come as a democratic country in the future ... and it's our contention that the Canadian policy is the way to get that kind of result rather than the policy pursued by our American friends," Harper told reporters.

Harper added that he viewed the issue as one of principle.

"I think we've taken a principled position, and when we take principled positions we're prepared to argue that and discuss them but obviously we don't have our positions dictated either by one country or frankly by any group of countries," he said.

What happens next is unclear. Santos said there would be a discussion on Cuba's participation at the summit three years from now, scheduled for Panama.

This year's summit was characterized by a new sense of unity and solidarity amongst Latin American countries, many of whom are seeing rapid economic growth and more geopolitical clout. Santos pointedly spoke at his closing news conference about the desire for all countries to be treated as equals — a nod to the weight the United States has thrown around the region in the past.

Mark Entwistle, a former Canadian ambassador to Cuba, said the issue is not always what it seems.

"It's a bit of a hemispheric dance here ... it's really less about Cuba per se for the Latin Americans, and it's more about using Cuba as a messaging board especially by the robust regional powers like Brazil and Mexico," said Entwistle, who still travels regularly to Cuba.

"It's using the Cuba coding or the Cuba item as a means of sending a message, particularly to the United States, that their views have to be taken seriously and that they're major regional players."

Europe. King of Spain comes under fire for extravagant hunting trip

Spain's 74-year-old king came under scathing criticism Sunday for going on an expensive elephant hunting trip in Botswana amid the nation's deep financial woes.

Making matters worse, an accident on the trip sent King Juan Carlos into surgery. Doctors said Sunday that he was recovering well after a hip replacement but would not be able to resume full duties for more than a month.

His son, 44-year-old Prince Felipe, was nominated to fill in for his father, who Spain's government relies on to patch up diplomatic disputes, boost international trade and serve as the country's high-profile liaison.

Tomas Gomez, Madrid's

regional Socialist party leader, said the time had come for the head of state to choose between his public responsibilities "and an abdication that would allow him to enjoy a different lifestyle."

Spanish newspapers were filled with accounts of how hunting trips to Botswana, where Juan Carlos fell, cost more than most Spaniards earn in a year. El Pais, Spain's leading newspaper, said the cost to arrange a hunting trip in Botswana to kill an elephant usually comes in at $57,850, about twice the country's average annual salary.

Spain is currently perceived as the weakest link in the 17-nation eurozone, and many investors fear it could become the next country to seek an international bailout. But the country with eurozone's No. 4 economy is seen as too big to bail out. Unemployment stands at nearly 23 per cent — nearly 50 per cent for young workers — and Spain is expected to slide into its second recession in three years soon.

The accident happened Friday while the king was on safari in Botswana's northern Okavango region and he was immediately flown home by private jet. Juan Carlos had a hip replacement early Saturday, and by Sunday had begun walking with crutches, said Angel Villamor, a spokesman for San Jose hospital where the king is recovering.

WASTE DEEP IN CITY'S GARBAGE PAMPHLET

URBAN

Terence Harding

The city is proposing that we select from five options for monthly fees related to garbage pick up.

According to the pamphlet it has produced, all options have high and low volume charges. Low volume is one container of garbage and one of recyclables. Two options have additional charges for each extra container, either $2.25 or $3.50.

Nowhere on its pamphlet does it indicate why these changes are necessary. What's prompting this initiative? What other approaches were looked at before deciding on these options?

And don't be expecting any kind of real discussion of the matter. Oh there are open houses and a survey, but as per usual, the discussion will centre on the city's ideas.

The best we can hope for is that things stay the same. But even that, means an increased cost. Right now, I pay $31.34 a month for waste pickup. The new rate will be $33.20 per month.

when pickup is once every two weeks? Do we get to put out two of each type of container?

If we go to a tag-a-bag approach, what additional costs are associated with creating, distributing and monitoring tag use? If people have half a bag of garbage and a bag and a half of recyclables, does the city expect people to use a tag rather than just putting the recyclables in with the garbage?

This initiative is a 20th century command and control approach. The city's not asking us for our ideas. It's telling us that it has its own ideas, and out of some kind of civic noblesse oblige, it will let us talk about them. And if you doubt that's its mindset, look at the wording on the pamphlet.

In four options, participating households will be "allowed" to put out one container of garbage and recyclables.

Now there's a very revealing word. I think it clearly shows that the city thinks we live here at its pleasure and its role is always to tell us what we are allowed and not allowed to do.

It has been said that all organizations have a department in charge of stupid ideas.

Edmonton's must be immense.

Weird news

Hanging by a wiper

A Vietnamese traffic cop went on a wild ride in Hanoi, clinging to the windshield wipers of a moving bus for nearly a kilometre after the rogue driver tried to avoid a ticket, police said Friday.

Traffic police 2nd Lt. Nguyen Manh Phan ordered the bus driver to pull over the 39-seat passenger coach Monday, said a police officer in Ba Vi District outside Hanoi. The officer spoke on condition of anonymity, citing policy.

The driver allegedly refused to show his paperwork and drove off — but not before Phan leaped onto the front, he added. The officer said the bus reached a top speed of about 50 kilometres per hour.

A video shot by one of Phan's fellow police officers shows the officer trying to get his footing and dangling precariously from the moving bus as oncoming traffic whizzes past. Phan can be heard yelling, "Call the police!"

The driver, Phung Hong Phuong, eventually pulled over after being chased by police and residents.

Even with the bus stopped, Phan stood calmly in front of it, still hanging on to the wipers.

Phuong was arrested for allegedly acting against public officials, an offence that carries a maximum three-year prison sentence, the officer said.

Connect Four

Elevator pitch: Bob & Carol & Ted & Alice meets Wanderlust

Plot: Two couples meet while on vacation in Tuscany, have too much Pinot grigio one night and end up experimenting in spouse swapping. While their friendship persists, the inebriated dalliance leads to therapy for one duo and a temporary break-up for the other. Will moving into a beach house in Malibu help this criss-crossed foursome pick up the emotional pieces of their scattered hearts?

Elevator pitch: Armageddon Meets Tetris

Plot: Set in Chicago in the summer of 2035, a trillionaire developer conceives a mega-condominium, quadruple the height of the CN Tower, assembled completely out of prefabricated modular units. Midway through construction the city is rocked by a 9.0 earthquake. A brave crew of super-crane operators from the army corp of engineers scramble to save the building from toppling by hoisting up the precariously balanced units and finding a new perch for them on the top of the building.

Stars: Tim Allen, Channing Tatum and Mike Holmes

Trivial Pursuit

Elevator Pitch: Saw meets Jeopardy

Plot: After a producer gets canned from the game-show network, he turns into a psychopath and begins pursuing former quiz show contestants. When he captures them he toys with them by forcing his victims to answer moderately difficult trivial questions like who won the World Series in 1994? If they know the answer he lets them off with just a wedge. But if they get it wrong, then it's game over.

Mark Deklin has a blast being 'one of the girls' on GCB

Coming out of the closet. Deklin plays a closeted gay man in series pilot; says character infused with his own personality

MEREDITH ENGEL

Metro World News in New York

Mark Deklin's character on GCB, Blake, has a secret: He's gay. But that's not a spoiler — we found out in the pilot, and we also learn that his wife knows. How will this play out in the remainder of Season 1 of the new southern-fried hit? We hit up the actor — whose résumé also includes stints as a Greenpeace volunteer and an English teacher — for answers.

What can you tell us about the remainder of the first season?

We're gonna start to see who these people really are.

For my character, as the season unfolds I get to do a lot more comedy. We spent the first half of the season really building my character's humanity, if you will, more than the humour, but by Episode 5 we sort of feel like we've earned the right to get a little wacky. That's one of the things I'm looking forward to because I had a lot of fun honing my comedy chops.

Do you consider yourself a naturally funny guy?

I do. I suppose that could be a matter of opinion. [Laughs] But I do think there's a certain science to comedy. So much of comedy is grounded in rhythm, timing. It's like music, and I have a musical ear. I know how to land it. I know what the comedy's asking you to do.

What's it like playing someone whose sexuality differs from your own?

One of the wonderful advantages of this particular role is [Blake's] not written as a stereotype. He's a closeted gay man, which is not something we've really seen a lot on TV. I didn't really quite know how to approach it, but what I've realized is I don't have to put anything on. No one looks at Blake and thinks he's gay. I don't play him as any kind of stereotype; I just sort of infuse my own personality into this character and give him a Texas accent.

There are a lot of pretty ladies on this show. How is it working with them on a daily basis?

It's wonderful being surrounded by so many beautiful ladies. When I come to work every day I'm surrounded by beauty. But the other great thing is they're all also really smart and really funny. It's also an interesting dynamic because I'm playing a gay character. Somehow because I'm the gay character on the show, I'm conferred with this almost honorary gay status, and so I get to almost be one of the girls. And it's really fun. I actually love it. I don't feel emasculated by it — I think it's wonderful.

So have you started indulging in girly treatments, like pedicures?

Oh, sure. Any actor who says they haven't is lying.

You used to be a Greenpeace volunteer. Why did you ultimately decide to do acting?

I was acting my whole life, but not professionally. I just never really took it seriously as a career option, so I was doing a whole bunch of other things out of college. Greenpeace was an organization I had always supported and a crazy opportunity came up. They were looking for rock climbers, and I'm a rock climber. I was visiting a friend in Boston, where they were interviewing, and I just felt, "well, I'm not employed right now," so I ended up working for Greenpeace. It wasn't really part of my master plan — it just sort of happened — but it was a very educational experience, and I felt good doing it.

Cleveland rocks on despite the absence of Axl

Rock and Roll Hall of Fame ceremony.

Former G N' R frontman refuses to put aside grudges for induction, rest of the band celebrates honour

The Rock and Roll Hall of Fame ceremony didn't miss Axl Rose at all.

The rowdy celebration, which in past years has included awkward moments, touching tributes and unforgettable performances, rocked on without Rose, the Guns N' Roses frontman who may one day regret skipping a night when 6,000 fans, 1,400 guests and many of music's biggest stars partied in Public Hall with the class of 2012 in Cleveland, Ohio.

Hard rockers Guns N' Roses — minus Rose — headlined this year's eclectic group of inductees. Others being enshrined are the Red Hot Chili Peppers, the Beastie Boys, folk icon Donovan, late singer-songwriter Laura Nyro and British bands the Small Faces and Faces.

Before the ceremony started with a blistering performance by Green Day, Chili Peppers lead singer Anthony Kiedis said it was strange to be enshrined while on tour.

"We're going somewhere," Kiedis said. "How can we stop and take an award when really we're just halfway there? But it is nice to be together with people that we spent some incredible years along the way writing songs and playing shows in little theatres and sweaty little transvestite clubs and having the time of our lives."

As Rose was somewhere else, Cleveland rocked without him.

The first mention of Rose's name drew a smattering of boos that were soon drowned out by the music.

Rose, the screeching frontman and ringmaster of the G N'

R travelling circus of dysfunction for decades, said earlier this week that he didn't want to be part of the ceremony because it "doesn't appear to be somewhere I'm actually wanted or respected."

He cited a continuing rift with his former bandmates as the main reason for not attending. His decision disappointed fans and ended months of speculation about whether the original Guns N' Roses lineup would unite for the first time since 1993 and perform any of their classic hits like Welcome to the Jungle or Sweet Child O' Mine.

A 30-year-old man has been arrested for trespassing at Sean "Diddy" Combs' East Hampton mansion, where he reportedly ate the hip-hop mogul's food, drank his liquor, tried on some of his clothes and then slept in his bed, according to TMZ.com.

Quamine Taylor, who reportedly has a history of mental illness, entered the vacant house through an unlocked basement door and was there for 24 hours before tripping an alarm.

But when police and an alarm company representative showed up, Taylor was able to convince them he had permission to be there. It wasn't until a caretaker arrived and called the police back that Taylor was arrested. Combs' rep had no comment.

Poor Quamine. If only someone had tipped him off that Combs' mansion was NOT a Notorious B&B, he wouldn't be in this mess.

Girl Guides set to gain various skills

Chocolate and vanilla sandwich cookies are on the menu as Girl Guides head out on their semi-annual selling spree. Girl Guide Cookies is the largest "girl-run" business in the country, Girl Guides of Canada said in a release. Each year more than 70,000 Girl Guides, from five-year-old Sparks to 18-year-old Rangers, gain financial literacy and business skills from selling cookies. Last year, members sold more than 112 million cookies, or 5,345,652 million boxes. "Each box of cookies sold supports dynamic Girl Guide programs and activities that encourage girls to develop their leadership potential, use their talents and push their boundaries while fostering their self-esteem," the organization said. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Just had a baby? Now munch on the placenta

Skin-care. More moms, including January Jones, are considering the benefits of their placenta, which many believe reduces the signs of aging and boosts energy levels

ROMINA MCGUINNESS
MWN in London, U.K.

Some mothers from all around the world have consumed their placenta for generations with little fanfare. Some say it's part of the natural process of giving birth that brings mother and child closer, others say it helps balance out hormones and fights postpartum depression, while some use it to fight aging.

But it was January Jones who made after-birth such a hot topic when she admitted that eating hers, post-baby, helped her get camera ready weeks after the delivery. And it's now not just consuming your own placenta for the benefits: beauty products are popping up with placenta as its main ingredient.

But some skin-care experts, such as Madonna's facialist, Michelle Peck, is skeptical.

"I'm not saying I'll never try placenta pills, I just need more convincing. I'd like to see more concise information to back the health claims," she says.

Mark Kristal, a behavioural neuroscientist at the University of Buffalo, agrees.

"Even though there are benefits to mammalian mothers that eat placenta at delivery, there is no scientific evidence that there are any benefits to humans."

He goes on to point out that all of the gushing reports about the benefits of placenta use have been based on anecdotes.

January Jones: Could placenta pills help you look like this? GETTY IMAGES

"I wouldn't recommend women take placenta pills, but that doesn't mean that at some time in the future, beneficial components might not be extracted or synthesized and administered medicinally," he adds.

Either way, the trend is picking up steam, and it's up to each mother to decide what's best for them.

Yay or Nay

YES

PILLS: If you're curious about taking it orally, you won't have to worry about weird side-effects. "It causes no allergic reactions or fatalities in mothers," says New York-based skin-care expert Carole Burns. "The only women who aren't good candidates are those with hepatitis A, B, or C and HIV/Aids."

FACIALS: "You can take the dried powder and place it into a gentle base such as pure olive oil and put it on your skin. It's good for skin conditions such as eczema," says Jodie Selander, founder of PlacentaBenefits.info. Meanwhile, those who have tried the placenta facials offered in spas claim that the treatment hydrates skin, reduces sun damage and leaves skin glowing. Jennifer Lopez, is rumoured to be a big fan.

HAIR CAPSULES: It's packed with protein, which repairs damage from heat, colour and perms.

NO

PILLS: You have to have a baby to try them. Once removed after the birth, the placenta is then cleaned, cooked, dehydrated and made into capsules that mothers are required to take daily or anytime they're feeling run down. So you're basically eating your after-birth, which is a skeezy thought. Plus, the medical world isn't sure about the results yet.

FACIALS: Did we mention that the placenta in those spa facials comes from sheep?

HAIR CAPSULES: The after-birth is taken from sheep, pigs and ox, which could make for a creepy thought the next time you're slathering on the hair treatment in the middle of your bath.

Parenting

Kid on a leash?

CAROLYN DREBIN
Mommyish.com

Since having kids, I've been freaked out by traffic. Parking lots, busy streets, even driveways have become safety hazards for me when I'm out with my children.

When each boy started nursery school, they developed an insatiable appetite for freedom. The preferred destination? Parking lots. I remember picking up my eldest, now nine, from school and within seconds of leaving the building, he'd be heading straight into the carpool lane. Needless to say, the vice-grip-hand-hold became de rigueur. It was a phase he eventually grew out of — but not before teaching his younger brother exactly how it was done.

And so, by the time my second son, now 7, started nursery, he too hit the streets whenever possible. But with him, I was prepared. My quick-draw-McGraw reflex to grab him surprised even myself. But what was I going to do? Use a leash? No way. I'd seen those parents. The relaxed ones. The ones walking through malls, airports, even parks, while their little ones meandered happily. On their leashes. I couldn't help but stare. And judge. These were children, not pets.

And then my 3 year old discovered the joys of the open roads. A few weeks ago he disappeared. My husband and I had taken separate cars to a party. My son insisted on going home with his daddy, so I left. Moments later my man called, asking me if I'd taken our youngest son home. Luckily, the mad dasher was found by a lovely woman.

I'm now reconsidering my view on the leash.

German Pork Stew.

You don't have to ruin your diet to enjoy a hearty meal

It's still cold out. You want something hearty. But you're also trying to eat better and don't want to ruin your diet with a cream-laden casserole.

A lean stew may be just the thing you need. Instead of being heavy, it's hearty with virtuous veggies, lean protein and warm seasonings.

1. Cut tenderloin into slices 4 cm (1 1/2 inches) thick. In a bowl, toss sliced pork with olive oil.

2. Heat a large saucepan over medium-high. Add pork and brown, 2 to 3 minutes per side. It does not need to cook through. Add onion and leeks and continue to cook until vegetables soften and begin to brown, 5 to 6 minutes.

3. Add caraway seeds, fennel seeds, celery seeds, mustard, black pepper, orange zest, orange juice and chicken broth. Bring to a boil, cover and reduce heat to maintain a simmer. Cook until pork is very tender, 15 to 20 minutes.

4. When pork is tender, use a slotted spoon to remove meat from liquid. Using 2 forks, shred pork to bite-size chunks, then return it to the pot. Add sweet potato, cabbage and celery. Continue to simmer until vegetables are tender, about 15 minutes.

Ingredients

- 500 g (1 lb) pork tenderloin, trimmed of fat
- 5 ml (1 tsp) olive oil
- 1 medium yellow onion, diced
- 2 leeks, white parts only, sliced
- 10 ml (2 tsp) caraway seeds, crushed
- 5 ml (1 tsp) fennel seeds, crushed
- 1 ml (1/4 tsp) celery seeds
- 15 ml (1 tbsp) Dijon mustard
- 5 ml (1 tsp) ground black pepper
- Zest and juice of 1 orange
- 1 l (4 cups) low-sodium chicken broth
- 1 large sweet potato, peeled and diced
- 375 ml (1 1/2 cups) shredded cabbage
- 2 stalks celery, diced
- Salt, to taste
- 125 ml (1/2 cup) fat-free plain Greek-style yogurt
- 30 ml (2 tbsp) ketchup
- 30 ml (2 tbsp) sweet pickle relish
- Chopped fresh dill, to garnish

Season with salt.

5. In a small bowl, stir together yogurt, ketchup and relish. Serve stew topped with a dollop of the yogurt mixture and a sprinkling of fresh dill.

Many people turn to Tim Hortons for a quick lunch, but the wrong choice can pack a real sodium punch. Here's what to watch for.

Ham and Swiss Sandwich

Chipotle peppers add heat to Mexican pasta

Pay no attention to the many shelves of faux salsas (blueberry-pineapple? Really?) and shove aside all those cans of low-fat, low-sodium, no-flavour refried beans.

For this week's under-appreciated ingredient, you will need to dig a bit deeper into your grocer's Hispanic section. Your goal? Mexico's gift to high-flavour cooking — chipotle peppers in adobo sauce.

Typically sold in 199-gram (7-ounce) cans, these not entirely attractive (truth is, they look a bit prune-like) peppers pack gobs of smoky, chocolaty, slightly sweet piquancy.

This weeknight meal comes together and has a kick of heat and smokiness from the chipotle pepper and adobo sauce.

1. In large pot of boiling salted water, cook pasta for about 10 minutes or until tender but firm. Drain well and return to pot, drizzle with olive oil, then toss and set aside.

2. Meanwhile, in a food processor, combine barbecue sauce, chipotle, adobo sauce and lime juice. Process until smooth. Add pork, then pulse until well chopped, but not ground. Set aside.

3. In a large skillet over medium-high, heat canola oil. Add onion and pepper and sauté for 6 minutes. Add pork mixture and simmer for about 6 minutes or until pork is no longer pink inside and sauce thickens.

4. Serve pork over pasta. Top each serving with a dollop of sour cream and a sprinkle of chives.

Something borrowed, something green

QUEEN OF GREEN

What can I do with my old wedding dress?
Jackie of Vancouver

Have you ever heard of upcycling? It's a form of recycling.

You take something that you might have otherwise thrown out and find a way to make it new again!

First, take your old dress and have it wet-cleaned — dry cleaning's greener cousin that doesn't use harsh chemical solvents.

Then find a seamstress to update the style.

A good seamstress can shorten or dye your dress after the big day so it can be worn again.

If your dress is quite dated, perhaps there are only components that might be re-purposed, like the skirt or veil.

If your dress is from a more recent era, check out SmartBrideBoutique.com (@Smartbride on Twitter).

They consign dresses online, making it easy to find a home for your old dress or shop for a new one.

Today's green brides can also choose from eco-friendly organic cotton, linen, vintage lace or silk.

And locally produced is best.

Dresses labelled Made in the U.S. or Europe may actually originate somewhere else.

They just get shipped to the claimed location for "finishing."

Look for a label sewn in.

And choose eco-friendlier silks — they're less processed and rougher in texture.

Peace silks are often the most sustainable.

The moth leaves its cocoon and lives out the last five days of its 70-day life cycle.

The silk is collected and woven on hand looms, mostly throughout northern India.

Many small villagers still harvest wild silks — often a natural golden colour.

Standard factory silk is the most processed of all of them.

Worms are hatched inside large warehouses and fed mulberry leaves.

Once the cocoons are complete — before the moths escape — they're boiled. This "natural fibre" never sees the light of day.

There are lots of options for dealing with your old wedding dress. ISTOCK PHOTOS

Smaller power grid, surer power

Go smarter, go smaller. The future is now with the advent of microgrids that will replace aging infrastructure

life@metronews.ca

One of the biggest problems facing our current electrical grid is its sheer size. Continent-spanning transmission grids require huge amounts of aging infrastructure, and waste eight per cent of all electrical power just moving it from one place to another.

The brilliant and imminent solution? Go smarter — and smaller.

"The whole idea of smart microgrids basically came to the fore when the utilities started looking at the possibility of overhauling their systems with new technologies and approaches," says Dr. Hassan Farhangi, director of the Group for Advanced Information Technologies at the British Columbia Institute of Technology (BCIT).

Amount of energy wasted as heat when carbon-based fuel is converted into electricity at a conventional power plant.

"One of the most important aspects of microgrids is service surety. You have a level of reliability that is unprecedented."

A smart microgrid is small and self-contained. It can include its own generation capacity — solar or wind, most likely. While it is connected to the larger grid, it will — in the near future — be able to function on its own.

"BCIT has a large campus in Burnaby with over 60 buildings," Farhangi says. "For the last five years, we have worked to convert this campus into a smart microgrid. The skeleton of a smart microgrid is already operating on campus."

The work is still in progress. BCIT consumes six megawatts annually, and is presently producing less than one. But all the technology needed to take this forward already exists.

"Microgrids are really a convergence of information technology, communications technology and power systems. These existing technologies need to be re-engineered and repurposed for application within a microgrid."

The potential savings are impressive. Farhangi notes that, in a conventional fossil-fuel generating plant, only 33 per cent of the available energy is actually converted into electricity. In a vastly smaller microgrid, this lost heat can be captured and distributed as power.

"Like any electrical system, microgrids are not immune from the well-known faults that you can have," he explains. "But the beauty of this is that any fault that happens is contained locally, and does not contribute to a domino-style of catastrophe across the entire system. If something happens, it's local and you deal with it locally."

For now, this is mostly in the future. But it's a future that will be arriving soon.

"Microgrids are up and coming," Farhangi says. "And investment across the country will be growing."

Andrew Dorfman takes a break from his alter ego, PigMonkey, in Halifax. ANDREW VAUGHAN/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Pitting geeks against the nerds

Live comedy-debate. Halifax improv show has contestants throw down for the honour of being the geekiest

It's long been the clichéd and tired symbol of bespectacled, pen-toting geeks.

So when comedian Andrew (PigMonkey) Dorfman set out to create Geeks versus Nerds, a live comedy-debate show in Halifax, he decided to reclaim the pocket protector for every self-professed nerd out there.

"We're taking it back!" says Dorfman, sporting a black T-shirt bearing the show's logo: the outline of a white pocket protector, replete with pen and pencil.

"I like challenging people's presumptions."

Raised on comic books and science fiction, Dorfman, 39, is among an aging generation of self-described geeks and nerds who are proudly embracing their quirks and obsessions.

Dorfman came up with Geeks versus Nerds in 2008 after musing about who would win in a fight: Boba Fett from Star Wars or Batman, the Caped Crusader.

The show, held monthly at Dalhousie University and recorded for podcasts, pits panellists against each other as they debate the merits of superheroes, villains and everyone in between.

More than 100 fans typically show up to cheer on their pick, whether it's the best modular hero (Marvel's Iron Man versus Transformers' Optimus Prime), or the whiniest teen prodigy in space (Anakin Skywalker of Star Wars versus Wesley Crusher of Star Trek.)

The goal was to reach out to like-minded people and bust stereotypes.

"If you listen to the show, you will learn that geeks are eloquent, they're smart, they're funny," says Dorfman, the show's host and producer.

"They're just really good people who cross all stratum of society and you wouldn't know."

With the popularity of sitcoms featuring nerdy characters, series that delve into the realm of fantasy and science fiction, and conventions like Comic-Con, some say geeky has finally gone mainstream.

As a high school student in the late 1990s, Florence Hansen lamented the lack of nerdy knick-knacks available in New Brunswick and longed for anything related to science, comic books or video games.

She just didn't talk about it.

"Back in the day it wasn't popular, so I kinda kept it on the down low," Hansen, 30, says with a laugh. "But I was always a geek at heart."

Four years ago, Hansen and her science fiction-loving husband, Luke, opened the Geek Chic Boutique in downtown Fredericton in the hopes of drawing out closeted nerds.

The shop — which proudly dubs itself the geekiest store in Canada — sells everything from Battletar Galactica board games to belt buckles that look like original Nintendo controllers.

"Geeks are becoming popular," says Hansen. "There's been a huge response, from four-year-old kids to people in their '90s. We seem to have a huge geek population that supports us."

THE CANADIAN PRESS

Geeking out

Dorfman attributes much of the progress to the fact that geeks have grown up and are now the power spenders of society.

- It's a geeks world. An entire generation who got hooked on Star Wars as children and devoted hours to playing Dungeons & Dragons are now adults who are no longer inhibited by insecurity and school bullies. Furthermore, Dorfman says grown-up geeks want to spend money on geeky things.

DELIA MACPHERSON
For Metro

For a young man of only 25, who, so far, has led a pretty exciting life — he's even played basketball with a U.S. president — Jonnie Penn sure talks a lot about death.

"I personally don't believe in 'seizing the day' or living every day like it's your last," says one of the members of The Buried Life.

"You burn yourself out living like that. It's more about 'don't close your mind to opportunity.'"

The Buried Life, the reality documentary series that began six years ago in Victoria, followed Penn and his three friends as they attempted an ambitious mission: to complete a list of 100 things to do before they die. And if this wasn't enough of a challenge, for every goal they checked off their list they helped a stranger fulfill one of their dreams, too.

The brave and-wise-beyond-their-years gang did what so many of us only dream of doing: they said "screw it" to their boring everyday life and went out to do something meaningful. And as well as a TV show, the group recently launched an inspirational picture book called What Do You Want to do Before You Die? This No. 1 New York Times best seller includes more than 100 illustrated answers to the title question, submitted by people all over the world.

"When we (The Buried Life) wrote out the list, we felt we could do anything. We really believed it. We wanted to give people that feeling," says Penn.

A look back

All this is the present. Back then Penn was broke and living out of his friend's closet. All four of the guys were going through a rough time in their lives: 50-pound weight gain, depression, no money, and death of a friend.

Their 100 list included such things as getting on the cover of Rolling Stone, kiss the Stanley Cup, deliver a baby, and play ball with the president. For Penn, the last on that list takes the cake.

"It was the closest I've come to living like Forest Gump," Penn says. "With Obama, that took two years of work. The game was never supposed to happen. The White House rejected us. The president himself saw the project on TV and made it happen. He was like the coolest dad you've ever met."

The Buried Life overcame a number of obstacles, such as their lack of money, and used their creativity in order to live out their dreams. They threw big parties and taught ESL courses to help raise funds.

NHL

Florida finally gets taste of playoff success

Stephen Weiss scored the first two playoff goals of his 10-year NHL career, Jose Theodore stopped 23 shots and the Florida Panthers got their first playoff victory in nearly 15 years, beating the New Jersey Devils 4-2 on Sunday night to even the first-round series at a game apiece.

Marcel Goc had a goal and an assist for the Panthers, who survived a frantic Devils rally in the third. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NBA

Heat handle Knicks in Big Apple

The Miami Heat finally came to Madison Square Garden, a sea of orange surrounding them in what looked like a playoff game.

LeBron James had 29 points and 10 rebounds, Dwyane Wade added 28 points and nine boards, and the Heat overcame Carmelo Anthony's 42 points to beat the New York Knicks 93-85 on Sunday to clinch the Southeast Division title.

The Heat's lone game in New York came with the compressed regular season coming to a close — and with the chance they'll be back to face the Knicks for the playoffs soon.

Flyers grab Pens by scruff of the neck

NHL. Briere, Read, Talbot each score twice as Philly puts Pittsburgh on brink of elimination Fists were flying faster than shots on goal. Sidney Crosby and Claude Giroux even became knotted in the pushing and shoving, a pair of stars willing to mix it up to prove which team was the baddest on the ice and the scoreboard.

The Penguins and Flyers talked trash, laid the smack down, and played one wildly entertaining game but the result was the same. The Flyers rallied from another early deficit for a Game 3 win that put them on the brink of a sweep.

Game 3
8	4
Flyers	Penguins

Danny Briere, Matt Read and Max Talbot each scored twice to lead Philadelphia to an 8-4 win over Pittsburgh on Sunday.

Giroux and Wayne Simmonds also scored to help the Flyers take a 3-0 lead in the combustible best-of-seven series. Game 4 is Wednesday in Philadelphia. The Flyers scored 20 goals in the first three games.

"Our goal is to finish it right away," Briere said.

Quoted

"You can make a story all you want about us getting frustrated. They're doing the same things we are. It's intense."

Penguins captain Sidney Crosby, insisting his team isn't getting rattled in the physical series.

The goals might be hard to find on a highlight reel. Three players were tossed in the first period. There was a rare fight between superstars when Crosby squared off against Giroux.

No one got the better end of that scrap. But by the end, Flyers fans serenaded the Penguins with chants of "you can't beat us!"

"All three games were kind of weird games," Giroux said. "I guess I like weird games because we always finish by winning."

Jordan Staal and James Neal scored twice for the Penguins. Marc-Andre Fleury was benched after allowing six goals in two periods. He has allowed a whopping 17 goals through Game 3. Coach Dan Bylsma said Fleury would start, "the next four games."

Hard to imagine at this rate, especially with NHL scoring leader Evgeni Malkin yet to score a goal for the Penguins.

Weber's goal silences Red Wings faithful

Shea Weber knew he wouldn't be popular in the Motor City.

The star defenceman didn't really care, he just wanted to win.

Weber turned boos into silence with a goal early in the first period and the Nashville Predators held on to beat the Detroit Red Wings 3-2 Sunday to take a 2-1 lead in the first-round series.

"I guess we're more focused on the game," he said.

Weber was jeered every time he touched the puck for smashing Henrik Zetterberg's face into glass at the end of Game 1.

Game 3
3	2
Predators	Red Wings

"We talk about great players when there's a little bit of controversy stepping up," Nashville coach Barry Trotz said. "When he came to the rink, he knew he wasn't going to be the most likable player in the arena."

Weber's goal snapped Nashville's 0-for-12 streak on the power play against the Red Wings in the series and helped the franchise end its 0-for-6 skid in playoff games against Detroit on the road.

The Predators, who are in their 13th NHL season, advanced in the playoffs last year for the first time and are trying to get past the Red Wings after being eliminated by them in 2008 and 2004.

Just when it looked like the Red Wings were finished off for sure in Game 3, Zetterberg scored with 54 seconds left to pull the Red Wings within one, but they couldn't force overtime.

Shanahan hands out bans after wild Game 2

Rangers forward Carl Hagelin was suspended for three games by the NHL on Sunday for elbowing Ottawa Senators captain Daniel Alfredsson in the head during New York's loss in Game 2 of the first-round Eastern Conference series. Hagelin apologized earlier Sunday, after a telephone hearing with NHL disciplinary officer Brendan Shanahan, and hoped to avoid punishment beyond the major penalty he served Saturday night. But instead, he will miss the next three games of the best-of-seven series. The Senators didn't escape unscathed, either, as defenceman Matt Carkner was given a one-game suspension Sunday for his role in a one-sided fight he started against Rangers forward Brian Boyle just 2:15 into Game 2. Carkner was given a major penalty for fighting, and was ejected.

Horoscope

Aries | March 21 - April 20.

You will be remarkably fired up this week. Both in your personal life and in your work you will be energetic and enthusiastic.

Taurus | April 21 - May 21.

You favor routines and methods you feel comfortable with but you will need to be a bit more adventurous over the next few days.

Gemini | May 22 - June 20.

This should be a really fun time for you, especially if you are ready to take a few risks in your private life.

Cancer | June 21 - July 22. No one works harder than you, but are you working for yourself or are you working for other people?

Leo | July 23 - Aug. 22.

You enjoy taking risks, it gives you a buzz, and with mind planet Mercury moving in your favor today you will be looking round for new ways to push the envelope.

Virgo | Aug. 23 - Sept. 22.

You need to be a bit more assertive when dealing with family issues and financial matters.

Libra | Sept. 23 - Oct. 22.

Anyone who annoys you this coming week is likely to find themselves on the receiving end of a tongue-lashing.

Scorpio | Oct. 23 - Nov. 21.

If you see an opportunity today you must seize it immediately.

Sagittarius | Nov. 22 - Dec. 21.

You're in a dynamic mood at the moment and you really don't care whose toes you tread on.

Capricorn | Dec. 22 - Jan. 20.

Something unexpected will happen today, something you did not plan for.

Aquarius | Jan. 21 - Feb 18.

Don't let anyone persuade you to abandon the path you have chosen to take.

Pisces | Feb. 19 - March 20.

You are very much on the ball at the moment and determined to make every minute count.
